Cambur Pintón is a film about the power of music. The documentary takes you on a musical journey through Venezuela to uncover the musical grooves of Venezuelan people’s daily lives. This film has no narration but superb imagery and sound, to showcase how a traditional instrument is made and how its rhythm can move people amidst economic and political struggles. The film’s co-producer Rennea Couttenye will perform live Venezuelan music and talk about the filmmaking process and Venezuelan culture.

Rennea Couttenye is a Venezuelan musician, writer, educator, designer and filmmaker. She performs nationally and internationally in venues such as Brava Theater, De Young Museum and San Jose Performing Arts, with artists such as Aquiles Baez, Wayne Wallace, John Santos, Orestes Vilató and John Calloway.
